POWER RANGERS LICENSING

Milton-Bradley's Power Rangers board game. The licensee also manufactures Power Rangers puzzles.

stores or rushing to meet shipment demands include: M.Z. Berger & Co. for wall and desk clocks, stick-on clocks, and computer wrist games; Landmark General for wall calendars and student planners; Ace Novelty for foam chairs and other items; Cap Toys for laser pops and a candy pinball machine; SLM International for products including swimming pools, sand toys, and battery operated ride-ons; Western Publishing for book products including sight and sound books; and the Wormser Company for thermalwear and outerwear.

One of the most recent and interesting deals between Saban and the licensing community involves an agreement with Xiphias, a leading publisher of multimedia CD-ROM titles. The Saban and Xiphias pact will result in the first-ever CD-ROM product based on a specific television program. Under the terms of the agreement, Xiphias will publish a Mac and PC compatible CD-ROM based on Mighty Morphin Power Rangers, to be available to consumers in the first quarter of 1994.

According to Saban, the product will feature over 100 minutes of video action as well as background text information and graphics that have never been available to consumers. "This agreement allows us to do what we do best," says Peter Black, president of Xiphias, "turn an exciting story and entertainment property into an interactive experience. Using our sophisticated yet user friendly Matrix Interface System, players can peel away layers of activity to get to the heart of the action."

Where to From Here?

Many properties with seemingly bright futures wither away all too quickly to make any sound predictions as to how long any license will last. But, the Mighty Morphin Power Rangers has undeniably established itself as a major property in a number of key areas: it is spawned from one of the hottest kids television shows ever, has mustered up tremendous support from the retail community (with an initial merchandising thrust rivaling that of the Turtles), so far managed to get the acceptance of parents, and has pulled in a surprisingly strong interest from girls.

The Power Rangers are also being positioned for the international community and have already made a strong showing in Canada, where, according to Marquee's Gordon Fanson, the property is as strong if not more so than in the States.

All in all, this makes for a super license and one that, as Debi Young notes, is being positioned to last for some time. She recently indicated that negotiations are well underway to produce a Mighty Morphin Power Rangers feature film for 1995 and the Fox Kids Network is already committed to at least with a good heart and a seemingly boundless supply of energy. His passion in life is music and dance and he relies a great deal on his intuition. As a Power Ranger, Zach's color is black and he draws power from the mastodon.

Kimberly is a bright and beautiful girl who loves mirrors, shopping malls, and gymnastics. Although she sounds like a valley girl, she is always positive when she's with her friends and saves her valley sarcasm for the bad guys. As a Power Ranger, Kimberly's color is pink and she draws her power from the pterodactyl.

Trini is slow to anger, but will, if pushed, neutralize any opponent with a minimum of effort. She is quiet and observant and quite intelligent. As a Power Ranger, Trini's color is yellow and her power comes from the saber-tooth tiger.

Billy, an ultra-intelligent kid, is considered a nerd by most people, until they get to know him. He talks in Technospeak and only Trini seems to understand him. As a Power ranger, Billy's color is blue and he draws his power from the triceratops.
